Meet the Speaker ...

Professor John Guillebaud

John Guillebaud is Emeritus Professor of Family Planning and Reproductive Health, University College London. He was born at Buye, Burundi, brought up in Rwanda, Uganda and Kenya, and continues to make regular training and support visits for healthcare professionals in Africa.

Ex-Medical Director, Margaret Pyke Centre for Study and Training in Family Planning, he is currently a vasectomy surgeon and Research Director at the Elliot-Smith Clinic, Churchill Hospital, Oxford, where he is involved in studies of the world's first non-hormonal 'dry orgasm' inducing male pill.

He is author or co-author of c 300 publications on environmental sustainability, birth control for women and for men, reproductive health and population; also of seven books, which are available in 10 languages including Chinese and Japanese. He also consults as requested on an ad hoc basis both internationally (e.g. WHO) and nationally (e.g. Department for International Development).

His choice of contraception for both genders as his specialty and life's work was driven by fear: that humankind, through ever increasing consumption and pollution per person multiplied by the increasing number of persons, would put this uniquely life-sustaining but finite planet in jeopardy.

He is the originator of the Environment Time Capsule Project (1994-2044) as described at www.ecotimecapsule.com,
Chair of www.peopleandplanet.net
Co-Chair of www.Populationandsustainability.org and Patron of www.optimumpopulation.org.

These days John spends an increasing amount of time with his two grandchildren aged 3 and 2 who live next door, and indulges his lifetime enthusiasm for cycling both for its fun and its convenience. He competed in the Brompton World Championship at Blenheim Palace in October 2010, finishing the hilly 13km course in 35 minutes and raising over £1700 for Breast Cancer Care. Participants must wear a jacket and tie, since the Brompton is a commuter bike, and with cycles initially in folded-up mode there is a Le Mans-type start. John plans more Cycle Challenges in 2011.
