Meet the Speaker ...

Dr Sara Ritchie

I qualified from Edinburgh in 1993, and worked as a GP Partner in east London for 10 years until I decided to become salaried again in 2019. I completed my dermatology diploma with merit in 2008, and have been working in a variety of dermatology clinics since then. I also have an MSc in Public Health and a Diploma in Tropical Medicine. I worked initially for 5 years as a hospital clinical assistant in dermatology with professorial support in UCLH in central London, doing general skin clinics, HIV skin clinics, and clinics in travel & tropical dermatology. During that time I co-authored 4 book chapters on dermatology.

Since then I have been working as a GPwER in 2 different dermatology services in south London, with Communitas Clinics and at Guy's hospital community dermatology service. I was also on the committee of the Primary Care Dermatology Society (PCDS) for 4 years, and for 3 of those years was the editor of the PCDS Bulletin. I have published review articles on Lyme disease and HIV dermatology for MIMS Dermatology, and have also written dermatology articles for Pulse. I have given talks previously for Pulse Live and MIMS Live. I do minor surgery and currently do 4 GPwER dermatology clinics per week.
